

General terms and conditions for the use of the Chicogrow website

By using the Chicogrow B.V. website (Chicogrow), you accept the General Terms and Conditions for the use of the website as detailed below. Furthermore, you declare that you will not hold Chicogrow liable on the basis of information, recommendation, and/or advice listed on the Chicogrow website. If you do not accept these General Terms and Conditions, then you cannot use the Chicogrow website.

All information on this website – including general recommendations, newsletters, and advice on cultivation or otherwise – was compiled with due care but is free of obligation and is at best indicative, but not applicable to a wide range of company circumstances and local conditions concerning cultivation or otherwise. The user of this website must decide for themselves whether the information featured on this website is suitable for the user's personal company circumstances and for use in local cultivation or other conditions.

All information concerning the legal conditions for use of crop protection agents and the applicability thereof in the countries in which they are available are offered as an avenue towards a solution. For a number of reasons, this information may be outdated, erroneous, or incomplete. The user is obliged to at all times consult the legal conditions for use (for example on the product packaging or on the website of the institution) and to check whether the application can take place within the period before the expiration date or deadline for use.

Chicogrow will in no case accept liability for results deviate from the information on the website or non-permissible applications.

Chicogrow is at all times entitled to amend this website and the contents of this website, including these general terms and conditions. Chicogrow cannot be held liable for any consequences of any such amendments. Solely Chicogrow is authorised to make amendments to this website.

This website can contain links or referrals to other websites. Since the content of other websites is outside Chicogrow's control Chicogrow cannot accept any liability whatsoever for the content of information provided by third parties on third-party websites.

This website may contain referrals to varieties that are not available in a given country. Consequently a referral of this nature never implies that Chicogrow markets the relevant variety in a specific country, or is of the intention to market the relevant variety in a specific country.

These general terms and conditions are governed by Netherlands law. The competent court for any disputes is the court in Roermond.